

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In this side lock apparatus, a opening and closing member is fixed to a support unit so that the opening and closing member can be opened and closed, left and 5 right latches being movably held on the opening and closing member, each of the left and right latches being urged by a pressure of a spring means toward a lock hole formed in the support unit, a free end portion of each of the latches being moved back from the lock hole in the support 10 member against the spring means by an operation of the operating handle, wherein the left and right latches are operatively connected together via a link lever supported rotatably via a shaft on the opening and closing member, the operating handle being provided with an operating 15 portion engageable with the latch, at least one latch being provided with not smaller than two contact surfaces engageable with the operating portion of the operating handle.